A REMEDY FOR "EACH DISEASE." T the request of many of my patiente, I have prescriptions in the form of FAMILY MEDI-CINES, each one suited to a particular disease, and not, like the manufacturers of the nostrums and panages of the day, promulgate to the world that any one compound will cure all diseases, and who. (to the words of the great Italian physician Spal lanzani) "put medicines which they know little, into bodies which they know less."

For Cholera, Dysentery, Bowel Complaints, &c., Dr. J. S. ROSE'S CARMINATIVE BALSAM This mixture is one of the most important medicines, and should be kept in all families as a "spe ciffe" for Cholers and Bowel Complaints it has nev er failed. THE BATTLE OF RAMSAOUR'S MILLS. The Daring Sons of '76.

We present our readers with a most briliant partisan adventure of the heroes of '76 and we think it will be read with much interest. We regret to say that it has been much neglected in the history of our country We take it from Dr. Caldwell's Memoirs of the Life of Gen. Greene:

Equally, perhaps, unknown to most of the nhabitants, and singularly neglected in the nistory of our country, is another gallant par tisan adventure, achieved on the 22d of June. 1780. Neither American regulars nor British | the brain, was instantly fatal. soldiers having any concern in this spirited affair, it was fought entirely by raw militia men, of the whig and tory parties

About twelve hundred of the latter having assembled under the command of Col. Moore, encamped in strong position at Ramsaour's river, and in the vicinity of the line which separates North from South Carolina. In which of the two states the encampment was siquated, is not at present distinctly recoilect ed, although the writer of this narrative has been frequently on the spot.

In addition to rapine, and the production of general distress, a favorite object of this party was to overawe and weaken the adjacent country, by capturing and carrying within the British lines a number of is most infliential nhabitants. Besides being thus prevented from taking a lead in the active measures of resistance, these were to be held as hostages for the good conduct and neutrality of their

To defeat the mischievous purposes of this party, and to dislodge them from their stronghold, the most spirited of the whigs from Iredell, a neighboring county, assembled to the number of three hundred men, under the command of Col Locke. These consisted principally of foot, but in part of a small corps of mounted infantry, armed with rifles, pistols, and sabers, led by capt. Falls, an officer of peculiar gallantry and worth.

This hasty levy of soldiers presented a spectacle eminently interesting. They were fresh from their homes, their private habits unbro ken, no discipline or concert of action established among them, and all their domestic feelings clinging around their hearts.

They were, in the true sense of the expression, a band of friends and neighbors, being had not repeatedly united with the others in rural sports and social enjoyments. As citizens they were all of the same rank, and re spectable They were masters of the soil they had assembled to defend.

Of this corps of patriots, the military prowess was entirely untried; not one of them, with the exception of Capt. Falls, having ever confronted an enemy in the field. Their only warlike acquirement was great expertness and skill in the use of the rifle In that qualification they had few superiors.

Being all dressed in their common apparel. they exhibited no uniformity of appearance To remedy this, and to distinguish them from the tories, who were known to be dressed in the same way, they fastened over the crowns of their hats, from back to front, descending to the rims on each side, strips of white paper, about two inches broad. Each one brought to the place of rendezvous his own rifle, fifty matiem, Obstinate Cutaneous Eruptions, Pintles or rounds of powder and ball, a week's provision, Pastules on the Face, Biotches, Boils, Caronic Sera and a light blanket. That they might be per feetly unique per patter, Scald Head, Enlarge. fectly unincumbered, neither baggage wagon nor pack-horse was attached to the party.

Thus accoutred, eager for battle, and pant ing for glory, without waiting for a considerable force that was assembling in Rowan, a neighboring county, under Gen. Rutherford. to join them, they moved in haste and silence towards the scene of action

The second day's march brought them into the immediate vicinity of their object They encamped for the night, determined to number, are, however, stronger testimony than the strike and hoping to surprise the enemy in the morning. But in this they were disappointed.

On advancing to the attack, about break of day, they found the fee on the alert, and ready to receive them. They, therefore, resolved to wait until it should be completely light, that the aim of their rifles might be the more deadly.

The morning opening, disclosed to them a preparation for defence and resistance, much more than they expected to find. The enemy were posted on top of a hill covered with timber, which afforded them a shelter. Their flanks were protected by a swamp, a small stream of water flowing in the rear. In front of their encampment was erected, of stakes Mixture, two bottles of which effectually cured me, and brushwood, a breastwork se compact as to be proof against small arms, and to impede, in a great measure, the operation of cavalry. A cult to tell any difference from a taoroughty strong detachment of the fee was stationed in advance of breastwork, armed with rifles and co: cealed behind trees.

At first, this array of men and means was appalling. But the Kubicon was passed. Retreat would be ruin, accompanied with disgrace-battle might also be ruinous, but could not be dishonorable. Without hesitation, there fore, the latter was resolved on.

At his own request, Captain Falls, with his mounted infantry led the attack. When at the distance of about eighty paces, he received the fire of the ememy's advance. Returning this with considerable effect, he rushed sword in hand, into the midst of them, threw them into confusion, and forced them to fall back. Pressing his fortune with too much ardor, he received a ball through his breast, and he fell dead from his horse.

For a time the issue was doubtful. Pressed by superior numbers, the whigs were once co npelled to give ground, some of them retreating across the breastwork. But resolutely bent on victory or death, they returned to the charge with such fierce impetuosity and great effect as bore down all resistance. The tories broke and fled in confusion, the whigs for same distance hanging on their rear with terrible slaughter. Thus terminated an affair in which so many
